

Will the Act Function

The people of Alberta are entitled to judge for themselves the unfairness and injustice of The Reduction and Settlement of Debts Act. This is the first of a series of short statements

Will the Act function? Be it just or unjust, will it work? There are cases pending in the Courts in which the question of the validity of the Act is raised. Until the decision of the Courts is rendered, it is natural that lending companies cannot be expected in the meantime to prejudice their rights. Companies have been and are still prepared, regardless of what the decision of the Courts may be, to enter upon negotiations and explore all avenues in an effort to arrive at arrangements fair to debtor and creditor, a course which was recently followed by companies doing business in the Province of Debtors should think over their position, and the doubtful security the Act might provide, before brushing aside the undertakings they entered into when they obtained their loans. Those who are not debtors should think what their position will be in a community where promises are lightly cast aside. If you cannot trust your neighbor—if your neighbor cannot trust you—what becomes of security and the basis upon which business and all other human relationships rest?

(The second statement in this series will be published in two weeks) able nature. And his constituents will know that he has gone back to Canada not as a politician but as a statesman.

There is one important point that McGee did make. He gave us some figures which show that local authorities, such as Vancouver, have to bear the burden of unemployment, police and other expenses to a far greater extent than that certain exemptions under the Reduction and Settlement Act, passed at the special session of the legislature had been made by Order-In-Council.

Chief among these was that exemption from the provisions of the Act of debt owing or due by any debtor who resided or resided outside of the province.

Unpayable sums are in any judgment made in any action for divorce judicially respecting alimony or in the municipalities, who look to Central Government for help, but that Canada's prime minister over here, he might find out how costs of government are shared in his country.
